

Jack Gausnell

Jack Gausnell and his wife, Glynda, moved to RVR at the beginning of 2011. Prior to moving to RVR, they lived in Missouri Heights on a small ranch for nine years. Both Jack and Glynda really enjoy the amenities of RVR with both of them regularly taking advantage of the swimming pool, golf course, tennis courts, and fitness classes.

Jack has an extensive background in both real estate and information technology (IT). Jack was brought up in a real estate family. Both Jack's parents were real estate professionals. His father was the founder of a large real estate agency as well as the president of the Real Estate Board in Kansas City. Jack obtained his first real estate license when he was only twenty years old. He not only sold real estate, but built spec-homes with his father before going into the computer industry. Jack began his career in the information technology industry in his twenties. During his twenty-five year career in the computer industry, he held titles such as Vice President of Sales and Managing Director of Europe for two of the industry's leading multi-national computer corporations. Upon dropping out of the computer industry in 2004 and returning to the United States from his European job, Jack went back to his real estate roots. Jack is now the owner of Roaring Fork Realty located in Carbondale, Colorado.

Jack is a big believer that Carbondale and more specifically RVR is one of the best places to live in the United States. He loves the diverse community and has enjoyed making this community he and his wife's home as well as his place of business. The community has been good to both he and his wife, and his way of giving back is to participate in the community through his involvement with the RVRMA Board of Directors and the Carbondale Rotary Club. As a Realtor, Jack is very much interested in continually improving RVR's desirability and property values. He always welcomes hearing suggestions for improvements from the RVR residents.
